

Competitor Intelligence Report

AIS Market — Market Analysis

Generated: April 23, 2026

5

COMPETITORS TRACKED

1

HIGH THREAT (4-5)

2026-04-23

REPORT DATE

COMPETITOR PROFILES — RANKED BY THREAT LEVEL

Owler

High Threat 4/5

https://www.owler.com

MESSAGING

Owler positions as a freemium competitive intelligence network built on crowdsourced company data and news alerts. Their messaging targets individual professionals who want to track competitors without heavy setup. Simpler and shallower than enterprise tools — competitor news feeds rather than deep signal analysis.

REVIEWS

Mixed ⭐ 3.8
Good for news alerts but data is often outdated

PRICING

Freemium
Free tier available. Owler Pro at ~$35/month. Owler Max at ~$50/month. Closest pricing model to AIS Market's planned structure.

HIRING

6 open roles
Engineering, Sales

THREAT RATIONALE

Owler is the most direct pricing and positioning analog to AIS Market — both freemium, both targeting teams without big CI budgets. Owler's weak reviews on data quality are AIS Market's clearest differentiation opportunity.

NOTABLE CHANGES THIS WEEK

First analysis

OPPORTUNITIES FOR AIS

Owler's top complaints are stale data and shallow insights — exactly what AI-powered weekly automation solves. AIS Market can directly attack Owler's positioning with messaging around 'fresh, AI-analyzed data vs crowdsourced guesses.' Owler's minimal hiring (6 roles) suggests low growth investment, leaving room to out-innovate them.

Data collected: website, pricing, reviews, jobs

Crayon

https://www.crayon.co

Moderate Threat 3/5

MESSAGING

Crayon positions itself as the enterprise-grade competitive intelligence platform for revenue teams. Their messaging centers on 'winning more deals' through real-time market and competitor tracking, strongly targeting sales enablement and battlecard generation for mid-to-large SaaS companies.

PRICING

Enterprise
No public pricing. Demo-required sales process. Estimated $15,000–$50,000+/year based on team size. Positioned well above AIS Market's freemium entry point.

REVIEWS

Positive ★ 4.4
Powerful but expensive and complex to set up

HIRING

18 open roles
Sales, Customer Success, Engineering

THREAT RATIONALE

Strong brand in the CI space but targets enterprise budgets — minimal direct threat to AIS Market's freemium, self-serve positioning for product and marketing teams.

NOTABLE CHANGES THIS WEEK

First analysis

OPPORTUNITIES FOR AIS

Crayon's demo-required, enterprise-only sales process leaves the entire SMB and mid-market self-serve segment unserved. AIS Market can own that segment with a freemium entry point. Reviews consistently cite Crayon as 'too expensive for what we need' — a direct opening for AIS Market's messaging.

Data collected: website, pricing, reviews, jobs

Klue

<https://klue.com>

Moderate Threat 3/5

MESSAGING

PRICING

No public pricing. Custom contracts only. Estimated $20,000–$60,000/year. Requires minimum team size to justify ROI.

REVIEWS

Positive  4.6

Best battlecard tool but steep learning curve

HIRING

Engineering, Sales, Product, Marketing

THREAT RATIONALE

NOTABLE CHANGES THIS WEEK

OPPORTUNITIES FOR AIS

Data collected: website, pricing, reviews, jobs

Kompyte

Low Threat 2/5

https://www.kompyte.com

MESSAGING

Kompyte (now part of Semrush) positions as an automated competitive intelligence platform with a focus on tracking competitor website changes, ads, job postings, and generating automated battlecards. Post-acquisition messaging emphasizes integration with the broader Semrush ecosystem.

REVIEWS

Mixed ⭐ 3.9

Good automation but post-acquisition support has slipped

PRICING

Enterprise

Pricing not public post-Semrush acquisition. Likely bundled with Semrush enterprise plans. Previously estimated $8,000–$25,000/year as standalone.

HIRING

5 open roles

Engineering

THREAT RATIONALE

Kompyte's acquisition by Semrush has caused product stagnation and support issues based on reviews. Its automation approach overlaps with AIS Market but it is no longer a standalone growth threat.

NOTABLE CHANGES THIS WEEK

First analysis

OPPORTUNITIES FOR AIS

Kompyte reviews post-acquisition are trending negative on support quality and product velocity — an ideal moment for AIS Market to target dissatisfied Kompyte customers. Minimal hiring (5 roles, all engineering) confirms the product is in maintenance mode. Message directly to teams frustrated with Kompyte's post-acquisition slowdown.

Data collected: website, pricing, reviews, jobs

SEMrush

Low Threat 2/5

https://www.semrush.com

MESSAGING

SEMrush markets itself as an all-in-one digital marketing suite with competitor analysis as one of many features. Their messaging emphasizes SEO, PPC, and content marketing intelligence. Competitor tracking is a feature, not their core identity — teams use it for search intelligence, not strategic CI.

PRICING

$50-200/mo
Pro at $139.95/mo, Guru at $249.95/mo, Business at $499.95/mo. All public, self-serve. Competes on breadth, not CI depth.

REVIEWS

Positive  4.5
Excellent for SEO but overwhelming feature set

HIRING

41 open roles
Engineering, Marketing, Sales, Data Science, Product

THREAT RATIONALE

SEMrush is a marketing suite, not a CI platform. Teams using SEMrush for competitor research are doing DIY work — they're AIS Market prospects, not satisfied CI customers.

NOTABLE CHANGES THIS WEEK

First analysis

OPPORTUNITIES FOR AIS

SEMrush users who want competitor intelligence beyond SEO/PPC have to stitch insights manually — a pain point AIS Market directly solves. Target SEMrush users in marketing with messaging around 'CI that goes beyond search data.' SEMrush's 41 open roles and $499/mo top tier signals they're moving upmarket, widening the gap from SMB teams.

Data collected: website, pricing, reviews, jobs